

WEEKLY NOTE 001

BG English Weekly Table Note

Predict, React, And Keep Talking.

One game idea, one English skill, and one practical use. This note supports corporate tables, Silver Circle sessions, and anyone building conversation through play.

THIS WEEK'S ENGLISH EXPANSION

I changed my mind.

This phrase turns a small strategy change into natural English. The learner does not need a perfect explanation. Saying it keeps the conversation moving and makes thinking visible.

FIRST STEP

I think this will happen.

REACTION

That surprised me.

CHANGE

I changed my mind.

Application For Corporate Users

Meetings often change direction. A game table gives teams a safe rehearsal space for saying what they expected, what surprised them, and why they changed direction.

Application For Silver Circle Users

The aim is not speed or correctness. Predicting, seeing what happens, and giving a small reaction creates gentle conversation, participation, and social contact.

Japanese Social Context

In many Japanese community and workplace settings, open conversation can feel too vague. A board game gives visible structure: turns, roles, choices, and a shared object of attention.

Sponsorship Space

Reserved for a cafe, company, education partner, or community sponsor aligned with language learning, local connection, and thoughtful participation.
